Introduction

Since 2003, Frank Edward Nora has been broadcasting his unique brand of lively, messy, stream-of-consciousness monologues to a small (but dedicated) Internet listening audience. Each episode is a pleasantly deranged ramble through the mysteries and pleasures of life, pop culture, current events, weirdness, technology, New York City, food, beverages, cartoons, conspiracy theories, childhood memories, New Jersey, coffee, the occult, Walt Disney World, vegetarianism, Star Wars, pinball, popcorn, Japan, mass transit, candy, video games, time travel, The Beatles, virtual reality, cigars, television, whiskey, and everything in-between.

In 2009, Frank welcomed in a diverse group of new hosts, to create The Overnightscape Underground (“Onsug” for short) – a podcast network starring dozens of hosts from all over the U.S. and the world, each with their own unique style.

There are new Onsug shows just about every day. Currently (May 2015) there are 6,455 tracks, totaling over 8.8 months of audio.

Onsug Guide provides you a list of every show in the archive, which are all free and available to listen to at:

onsug.com/guide

With so much amazing stuff to choose from, Onsug can be a little overwhelming at first. But rest assured, as you become more familiar with the various hosts and shows, you’ll find it much easier to navigate and find shows that will be keeping you company for many years to come.

The Hosts

Frank Edward Nora from New Jersey started it all with The Overnightscape in March 2003. In 2007, he started The Overnightscape Underground as a side project, and by 2009 it became a podcast network. The Rampler arrived in 2008 as another side project, and in 2009 it was briefly on the radio airwaves of WFMU. In the Fall of 2009, Frank ran into some chaos, ending his existing shows and starting The Frank Nora Show. But by 2011, The Overnightscape was back and it's been going strong ever since.

PQ Ribber from Truth or Consequences, New Mexico joined Onslug in June 2010 with Conspiracy of the Insignificant. He's done numerous different shows, producing more content on Onslug than anyone besides Frank. Since 2013 he's been doing Quaquaversal Satellite. In late 2010, he began Overnightscape Central, where all the Onslug hosts are invited to record on a particular topic each week.

Eddie Murray from Ireland was the first host to join Onslug in May 2009 with Trampler Sampler. He continued the series as Trampler starting in October 2010, and changed the name to Cloud Base 44 in December 2011.

The Meanderer was the second host to join Onslug, in September 2009. He's been doing shows on and off ever since, and is known for his unique longform rambling style.

Bob LeMent from Illinois began Morning Commute (with Bob) in September 2009, and he's been recording weekly on his drive into St. Louis ever since. Bob also hosts a show that's not on Onslug, Static Radio, which has been going since 1999.

Brian Jude from New Jersey joined Onslug in September 2009 with The Brian Jude Show, which continued till December 2011. In 2012, Brian did two shows, Manifesting Mastermind and Success Odyssey.

Jim & Lillian Fidler from Newfoundland, Canada, joined Onslug in December 2009 with Republic of Avalon Radio. They've shared a number of episodes of the show on Onslug over the years.

Wayne Reichert from Long Island, NY, joined Onslug in February 2010, with a reboot of his show Sparetime Radio. He had a great run of shows, and was a big presence on Onslug for several years.

Chad Bowers, originally from Mobile Alabama, and now Texas, came on board in April 2010 with a distinctive surreal style on Chadcast. He's also a stalwart contributor to Overnightscape Central and various experimental audio pieces.

Manny the Mailman from New Jersey launched Special Delivery on Onslug in April 2010, and continued it regularly into 2011. He's also joined Frank and Roel from the Netherlands on many adventures in and around NYC.

Mark from England / Hootie1233 from Newcastle, England, began Across the Pond in June 2010, with his perspectives on pop culture, politics, celebrity and everything in-between.

Greg & Rob from New Jersey started The Paunch Stevenson Show, "The Ultimate Pop Culture Podcast", way back in October 2005. Frank added their complete archive to Onslug in January 2013, and posts all their new episodes as well. Rob has known Frank since 2000, when they were both part of the band Fuzzy Daupner.

Mike Boody from Birmingham, Alabama, joined Onslug with the 18th episode of his show The Midnight Citizen in February 2011. Originally recorded in the middle of the night on his paper route, Mike's thoughts and observations hearken back to the classic age of late-night radio.

Carrie Michel, originally from Texas, now in Colorado, brought The Carrie Michel Show to Onslug in November 2011, talking about her journeys in life, playing music and Old Time Radio shows, and much more.

Shambles Constant is one of the most prolific hosts on Onsug, producing a number of different shows, sometimes taking long breaks between waves of content. He came on board in December 2011 with Anybody's Guess, which he renamed The Shambleshow the following month. Since 2013, his main show has been Eclectic Symmetry.

Jimbo from Georgia joined Onsug in 2013 as a contributor to PQ's shows Pop Culture qd and Quaquaversal Satellite. In 2014, he produced Saved from Oblivion. In 2015, he began The Frank Nora Time Machine – going back to the beginning of The Overnightscape and playing clips from each show. Jimbo is also the world's foremost authority on the old time radio show Vic and Sade.

Marc Rose from Portland, Oregon, came on board in February 2015 with Fuse Box, bringing a new level of audio production and weirdness to Onsug.

Sarjé from Minnesota did The Saint Paul Skyline for a few months in 2010.

Rich from North Carolina did I'm Just Sayin' in 2010 and 2011.

Bi-Coastal Becky has been doing her show since 2010, as well as contributing to Overnightscape Central.

Bi-Coastal Becky has been a listener since 2004. Frank met her in 2005 when he went to California and she picked him up at the airport and took him to Disneyland and Ontario Mills Mall. She was Becky From California until 2010, when she started her show, Bi-Coastal Becky, and began contributing to Overnightscape Central. She has sent boxes of snacks and beverages for him to review and was a subscriber to the ABM Show.

Neal from Ireland has been a long-time friend of Onsug. His show, Into Your Head, is not on Onsug – but he did a special version of it called Over Your Head in 2010 and 2011, and has been on Overnightscape Central many times.

Escapist did Escapist Radio in 2010, and has met up with Frank on several episodes of The Overnightscape.

Peter Bernard produced the 418 Show in 2010, as well as the cartoon-based Americast in 2010 and 2011.

Alex did Into The Ether in 2010.

Geoff Sink's audio drama series The Unbodied was on Onsug in 2010 and 2011. His monologue series The Echo Dispatch was on in 2013. He was also a stalwart contributor to Overnightscape Central.

Simon from Nevada told his Scary Stories from 2010 to 2012.

scottlo produced two short-lived, but truly fascinating series for Onsug in 2012 – The Pro from Dover and scottlo calling.

Byron Duddle is the host of GunkCast, and he has shared many episodes of the show on Onsug starting in 2012.

Brazen Gestures from Berlin, Germany shared a few episodes with us in 2014, and we hope to hear more from him.

There are many more personalities who have contributed to Onsug in various ways...

Joining Frank in the early days of The Overnightscape on many episodes were his father, Frank Ralph Nora, and his sister Julie. He was joined on many Three Weasels adventures by Peter Litkey and Bryan Cassidy. On Anything But Monday he was joined by Mad Mike. He went on many yearly adventures with Roel from The Netherlands and Manny the Mailman.

On PQ Ribber's Overnightscape Central, there have been many contributors who do not host their own show on Onsug, such as Doc Sleaze, Joe Gipson, Cali Dingo, and Nate from Wisconsin.

PQ's show Bug Out has featured Stephen Jules Ruben. PQ's Here in Heck is co-hosted by Q and Narai.

Additionally, I want to thank the hundreds of other folks who have appeared in audio on Onsug – as guests, listeners, callers, friends, and random encounters. There are so many interesting people to meet on your journey of Onsug listening!

The Archive

Up to and including April 2015:

130 Lots

6,455 tracks

6415:22:19 (263.3 Days / 38.2 Weeks / 8.8 Months)

Average length – 59:38

Preserving the audio of The Overnightscape Underground has been a massive effort over the years. This book is an attempt to sort all the shows in a logical, coherent way that's easy to navigate.

There are two audio formats in Onslug – hi-fi MP3 (generally 128kbps stereo) and lo-fi MP3 (24kbps mono). Hi-fi is preferable, but the lo-fi takes up a lot less space, and sounds decent.

As mentioned in the Introduction, I've collected the shows in lo-fi audio as they are listed in Onslug Guide at:

onsug.com/guide

The complete, hi-fi archive can be found at:

archive.org/details/theovernightscapeunderground

However, this set is in a very different order. It's organized by "Lots", which in general lists shows in chronological order, as they were released. You will find a PDF file called Overnightscape Handbook which will help you find things in this Lot-based archive.

This set is also available in lo-fi at:

onsug.com/lofiloose

onsug.com/lofizips

Pocket Overnightscape was a project that organized the archive into 12–24 hour "patches" of audio, can be found here:

pocket.overnightscape.com

archive.org/details/Pocket\_Overnightscape\_Channel\_1\_The\_Overnightscape

New shows are coming out almost daily, and you can search and listen to most of the archive in blog form at:

I also release The Overnightscape by itself at:

TheOvernightscape.com

Episodes 1–750 and 782–812 are here only – not on the onsug.com blog.

Beyond all these online sources, there are some full copies of the archive on flash drives and hard drives kept by individual hosts and listeners. We are always looking to expand the number of local copies that are out there.

In the future, I would like to simplify all of this into one app where everything can be easily found, and where new shows can be released.

But even if things are a bit disorganized for now, you should be able to find everything if you look around a bit.

The Onsug Story

I've wanted to do radio shows as long as I can remember.

When I was two years old in 1969, my father interviewed me on tape, and you can tell I was enjoying doing some recording.

In the next few years, I did more of my own recordings on that same ancient tape recorder. Then on my tenth birthday, in 1977, I got a tape recorder of my own, and recorded tons of 70's kid parodies of TV shows and the like.

Looking for a college to go to in 1985, I remember always asking about the radio station, and being interested in doing a show.

I wound up going to Drew University, in Madison, NJ, in Fall 1985. There I met "Mad Mike" and the following semester we started a comedy radio show on the college radio station, WMNJ, called "Anything But Monday".

After a few months we were kicked off the air for "offensive" humor, and continued the show as a magazine. In Fall 1986, we returned the airwaves and continued the magazine.

The show lasted till 1988, but the magazine became our big project, and we published it nationally as a comic book from 1988–1989.

Come 1990, the magazine and radio show were finished, and I kept working on my own experimental publications. Also that year, I produced a video series called "Beublin A. Richardson" with my friend Peter.

In 1991, Peter and I produced a show on tape in his basement room called "Train Crap & Blood" – really a kind of proto-podcast – but there was no way to distribute it, other than giving a few cassette copies to friends.

In 1994, I started my Obliviana project with an e-zine, followed by a website in 1995. This was a kind of occult game and entertainment project which never had much of a following.

In 1999, I registered the domain name "Bluffcosm.com", and initially thought it would be a kind of online virtual world. But a few months later, in March 2000, I decided to make it into an online radio station.

In 2000, web hosting came with very little storage space, so I could only have a few hours of MP3s on my site at any given time. But I was able to host my audio on MP3.com, an early Internet audio site.

For the next few years, I released a number of “Blufftoons” on MP3.com. At the same time, I was working with my wife and her sister Carrie on the band Fuzzy Daupner, joined by Rob DiCaterino (later of The Paunch Stevenson Show) and Phil Mould from England.

By 2002, Fuzzy Daupner broke up, and Bluffcosm was stalled. But I had acquired a massive archive of The Jean Shepherd Show – and I spent over a year listening every day.

Jean Shepherd, best know for the film “A Christmas Story”, did a monologue show on NYC radio station WOR from the mid-1950s to 1977.

He never had any guests – he just talked to the audience, telling stories, talking about things he was doing, culture, philosophy, stories from his childhood, and many other things. There was something so different, so intimate about this monologue format that I decided to try it out for myself.

In 2002, I purchased new audio equipment for a new project I wanted to start. I got a Shure 55SH microphone, a Joemeek MQ3 channel strip, and Behringer mixer, and a MadPlayer “generative music” device to create copyright-free background music. I had this equipment for a year before really doing anything with it.

On Thursday, March 13, 2003, I was on my way home from work in NYC, riding the PATH train back to NJ. Here’s exactly what I wrote on my Palm Pilot:

3/13/03 6:54 pm

non-meta half-hour talk show, just me *the overnightscape

3/13/03 7:03 pm

nightscans*

I decided to go with the name “The Overnightscape” rather than “Nightscans”. Once I got home, I set up my recording system, and started the show at around 9:55 PM – just 3 hours after I came up with the idea.

That first recording was lacking in a number of ways, so I decided to set it aside and try again the next week. Thursdays were my wife Denise's bowling night, so it was a good time for me to record a show.

The next week, on March 20, I did another test episode, and this one as well was not too good, so I set it aside. These two shows are known as the "Beta Episodes".

But the following Thursday, March 27, I recorded what would become The Overnightscape #1. I released it on Bluffcosm.com soon thereafter and the show was born!

A few weeks later, I almost started doing another show. There was a streaming Internet radio station based in Fords, NJ, called "No Holds Barred Radio". I had worked out with them that I would do a Sunday night show called "Violent Plaza" using the name Frank209, with my sister Julie as co-host.

At the last minute, however, they told me they had already promised the time slot to someone else – so I abandoned my plans for Violet Plaza. I'm happy things went this way, because looking back, Violent Plaza could have derailed The Overnightscape.

In May 2004 I decided to retire Bluffcosm, and The Overnightscape was now the main thing.

I continued doing The Overnightscape weekly into 2004, with a small audience. During the Summer of 2004, podcasting was "invented" – and I found out about it in late September or early October.

I had met Bob LeMent of Static Radio in 2001. I reviewed his show on an early Internet audio links page I had set up, and he emailed to thank me. Static Radio, which began in 1999, started podcasting in September 2004, I think, and I took their RSS feed and hand-edited it create an RSS feed for The Overnightscape.

The Overnightscape #86 (10/17/04) was the first episode I released as a podcast, and I've been podcasting ever since.

As I recall, I was one of the first 30–40 podcasters to list their shows on the early podcast directories.

The following month, I was contacted by a reporter for the major British newspaper The Times of London. He interviewed me and featured The Overnightscape prominently in an article on podcasting in their weekend magazine.

I began adding podcasts to my NewTimeRadio.com directory – but it quickly became too much work, as thousands of new podcasts came onto the scene in 2005, so I only added a limited number of shows till May 2006, when I stopped adding new content, but kept the site up for historical purposes.

In 2004, I started another podcast called “Daily Podcast From Another Place”, using my Bluffcosm audio. It was meant to be mysterious, and only lasted a few months.

In January 2005, excited by the new world of podcasting, I decided to start doing The Overnightscape as a daily half-hour show. I did the show 7 days a week for a few months, before cutting back to 5 days a week in April.

At this point the show was doing great – there seemed to be several thousand people listening, and there was a very active Overnightscape Forum. My father, Frank Ralph Nora, and my sister Julie were regular guests on the show.

In June 2005 Apple added podcasting support to iTunes, which increased the podcast audience greatly. By this time, I began to use the old Obliviana “wings” logo as The Overnightscape show art.

In November 2005, I went out to the Podcast Expo in Ontario, California, and it was very exciting. The whole podcasting thing seemed ready to really take off. My show was doing well, and I was even nominated for a Podcast Award.

In December 2005, I started a new blog/podcast called “Station Unlimited”, as a place to release various audio pieces that I didn’t want on the main Overnightscape feed. Looking back, I see this as a forerunner to The Overnightscape Underground.

The show continued into 2006, and while things were still going well, it seemed that the listening numbers had stalled at around 1,000–2,000 listeners. I had anticipated it increasing steadily.

In October 2006 I went to the Podcast Expo in Ontario, California once again, and the excitement from the first time was gone. The entire podcast scene seemed to have stalled. The predictions of massive growth from the first expo hadn’t happened. I felt like an unknown face in the crowd – that all my hard work had not paid off.

As soon as I got home I decided to stop with the daily shows, and just do one long weekly show. I was disillusioned, but I wanted to keep the show going. I just didn’t want to spend so much time on it anymore.

My disappointment led to me being open to take on a new project shortly thereafter. I reconnected with Mad Mike, my college radio co-host, and we decided to revive the Anything But Monday show as a premium podcast. In early 2007, we bought tons of new equipment and set up a studio. I built a new website and a premium podcast system.

By February 2007, we had a handful of subscribers, and we started doing the show weekly. But it quickly became apparent that we had bitten off more than we could chew. The workload was crushing, and after eight weeks, we were forced to pull the plug on the project.

It was a rough time for me, but I continued to record The Overnightscape regularly, though no longer on a strict weekly schedule.

Toward the end of 2007, I was working on a “secret project” which would eventually be revealed as The Overnightscape Underground.

I felt I needed a new platform in which to release more “underground” audio, without needing to maintain the tone of my main show, The Overnightscape.

The initial format for The Overnightscape Underground was “Days” – 24-hour blocks of audio divided into tracks, and saying the “virtual time” during the hosting parts. It was a very awkward and convoluted idea, and I only did 5 “Days” before changing things.

So 2008 arrived with me still doing The Overnightscape, and also working on The Overnightscape Underground.

By the summer, I was concerned that I was spending too much time at home doing the show, and not spending time with my wife, Denice. So I figured out a way of recording shows on my commute to New York City, using a digital recorder.

I decided to create a new show in August 2008 called The Rampler, using this method. Looking back, I realize that should have just kept the show as The Overnightscape, with more episodes recorded on the commute. But that’s not what I did.

So, I was doing three separate projects – The Overnightscape, The Overnightscape Underground, and The Rampler. By November 2008, I decided to combine all three into a single blog/podcast called The Overnightscape Underground, at onsug.com.

Around the same time, I got involved in the “Andy Kaufman Lives” phenomenon, where a guy on Twitter was claiming to be the comedian Andy Kaufman, who faked his death in 1984.

The Rampler got intertwined with this phenomenon, and I got a lot of new listeners from the people who were into this whole Andy Kaufman thing. I wound up interviewing this guy (using a voice changer), and even hosting the “Andy Kaufman Press Conference” in New Brunswick, NJ in November 2008.

One of the members of the press invited to the press conference was a DJ named Bryce from WFMU. Afterward, the program director from WFMU contacted me and asked if I’d like to try out for a show on his radio station.

2009 was dominated by WFMU for me. In the first half of the year I was developing the show, and did a number of test shows and then live fill-in shows, before getting on the Summer schedule.

I did 16 weekly shows, Saturday mornings from 2 AM to 6 AM, from June to October.

At the time I was still doing all my other projects, and I was very overloaded. By the end of August 2009, I announced that I was canceling The Overnightscape and The Rampler. I would continue with The Rampler on WFMU and The Overnightscape Underground.

A month later, near the end of September, I found out that WFMU had canceled my show without any warning. While it was a relief at some level, it left a very bitter taste.

I did my last few WFMU shows knowing it was canceled, and did shows on The Overnightscape Underground in a more causal way.

Also around this time, I created OnslugBox – a collection of all the recordings in Onslug, plus some archival material. It was definitely an important step in preserving the audio.

By mid-October, I had completed my last WFMU show, and I decided to take a “radio vacation”. During that time I did a lot of soul searching, and went on a trip to Austin, Texas for my sister-in-law Carrie’s wedding.

During that time, I really didn’t know what I was going to do, and giving up the whole thing was a distinct possibility. But after about three weeks, I returned to doing recordings on The Overnightscape Underground, in a series of shows that would eventually become The Frank Nora Show.

During that same time, something magical happened – other people started sending me shows to put onto The Overnightscape Underground, and this was the birth of Onslug as it is today.

For many years, people had been sending me audio to play on the show. But in May 2009, Eddie Murray from Ireland sent in a 3.5 hour “audio letter” from Manila, Philippines called “Trampler Sampler”, which I put onto The Overnightscape Underground.

Then in September, four more hosts sent shows in to be included on Onsug – The Meanderer, Bob LeMent, Brian Jude, and Awesome Wes. While it was the first and last show from Wes, the other three became stalwart hosts on Onsug, with Bob and The Meanderer still active today.

As 2010 began, more hosts started joining Onsug, and April 2010 was a breakthrough month, with a huge number of shows and new hosts joining up. It felt like something new, something important, and maybe, finally, something that would bring us wider recognition.

At the end of May 2010, I officially started The Frank Nora Show with #1500 – counting all of my previous shows. At the time, I felt that The Overnightscape name was represented by the overall network name “The Overnightscape Underground”, so I opted for the new show name that seemed to fit into the scheme of things better.

In June 2010 I recorded music from my MadPlayer and released it into the public domain as “Midnight Cassette System”.

By July 2010, I was getting overwhelmed by the sheer number of shows that I needed to post to the channel. At first I proposed an idea called Rampler Commons, where hosts would upload their shows themselves to Archive.org and then place links in a forum. But this did not last long.

I created a new posting system soon thereafter, so that the hosts could post their shows to Onsug directly, without me having to do it, and this helped the situation greatly.

As 2010 wore on, the new Onsug phenomenon started cooling down a bit, and became more manageable. On the other hand, my hopes were also chilled that this was finally going to be the phase where things “took off”.

In November 2010, PQ Ribber and I came up with the concept for Overnightscape Central, a weekly show where all the hosts (and listeners) were invited to record a segment on a particular topic each week. PQ, who had joined Onsug in July, offered to host and put the show together – and it’s been going strong ever since.

Early in 2011, I added the complete Onsug archive to Archive.org, and made sure to upload each new monthly “Lot” there as well.

Onsug was going along well in 2011. Then, as now, Onsug seems to have achieved a strange kind of balance, with enough listeners and excitement to keep us all motivated to keep doing shows, yet never really making any upward progress in terms of listener numbers.

I did, however, become disillusioned with The Frank Nora Show, and in April I ended it and created “The Rampler Weekly”, which only lasted for three weeks. I then decided to bring back The Overnightscape.

The Overnightscape returned on May 9 with episode 782, after nearly two years of absence. Of course, The Rampler and The Frank Nora Show were essentially the same content as The Overnightscape – but somehow the name of the show really did matter to me.

The return of The Overnightscape was awkward in several ways. First, I decided to split each episode up into lettered subdivisions. This only lasted for about a month, and then I went back to normal numbering.

This also made the Frank Nora Show “1500” numbering more confusing, since I was back to episode 782.

But The Overnightscape was back to being the main show, and my rule of thumb is that I have done 950 episodes beyond The Overnightscape. So, for example, episode 1050 was the 2000th show that I had done. But I am trying to let go of all this numbering madness as best I can.

Another issue was that I decided to split The Overnightscape from Onslug. So I was no longer releasing my shows on Onslug.com, but only on TheOvernightscape.com. This is an unpopular decision with the other hosts, who felt that Onslug was dwindling without my main show on there. So I merged The Overnightscape back in with Onslug in September 2011.

Since then, I have been releasing The Overnightscape on both onslug.com and TheOvernightscape.com – since a number of listeners wanted to be able to get my show without having to deal with all the other shows.

In the Fall of 2011 I was also working on “Trash Am Records” – a project to collect Creative Commons licensed music into “CD” compilations. I did 6 volumes, which led to “500 Song Trip” in 2012.

Also in Fall 2011 I was working on a new project called Nightstation. Nightstation is an ongoing saga in my life that has had many twists and turns, to this day. But that original Nightstation was the idea of recording long “Patches” of audio – 8 to 12 hours each – and air them as a live, streaming Internet radio station.

The idea was that we were broadcasting from an imaginary “virtual studio” with a “word on the wall” to identify each Patch. We considered it “virtual live” since when someone listens, the reality of the host and the listener “synch up”.

We produced a lot of Patches in just a few months – myself, PQ, Shambles, Chad and Eddie. However, managing the stream was a lot of work, and the sheer diversity of the material, much of it longform, made it hard to imagine getting many people to listen, and very few were. After just a few months, I shut the project down.

I spent a number of the subsequent months trying to revive Nightstation with new configurations, but nothing seemed to work, which was a shame, because there really was something there. But I do think a lot of ideas from that original Nightstation influenced many of our later shows.

2012 was solid year with tons of amazing shows, and some new hosts. The Overnightscape was back, and Overnightscape Central roared into its second year of remarkable episodes.

In August 2012, I released “500 Song Trip” – an expansion of the Trash Am Records project. I hand-selected and sequenced 500 Creative Commons licensed songs and released the set on Archive.org.

In September 2012, I release a massive new collection of public domain MadPlayer music with “New Midnight Cassette System”.

Also in September I had an Anything But Monday reunion with Mad Mike, called “ABM 2012”. We went back to Drew University and broadcast from their new radio studio in the student center. It was quite an enjoyable and surreal event.

In October 2012 I released “MyVirtualBand Featured Songs” – a set of Creative Commons licensed songs from a defunct music collaboration site.

In January 2013, I added the complete archive of The Paunch Stevenson Show to Onslug. This is a show co-starring Rob, who had been in the band Fuzzy Daupner back in 2000–2001.

Also starting in January, I added a new feature to The Overnightscape – the Other Side. This was a selection of music and audio clips at the end of each episode. It became the new place for me to play Creative Commons licensed music, and also the kind of audio clips I would play on Nightstation and my various other “patchwork” shows, such as Sneaky TT.

The Other Side has been a great success, and continues to this day. It’s great to be able to combine my major creative urges for audio into one show.

In March 2013, I started releasing the “Other Side Casks” – collections of the Other Sides on their own, with the idea that they would be fun to listen to by themselves. I continued releasing the Casks until mid-2014, but stopped because there didn’t seem to be much interest in them, and they are, after all, repeated material. I may release them all in the future... we’ll see...

In March 2013, for the 10th anniversary of the show, I created “Pocket Overnightscape” – a complete Onslug archive organized into 12–24 hour “Patches” – meant to make navigating and listening to Onslug easier.

It was a huge project, and ultimately I’m not sure how much anyone was able to get out of it. Still, it was a big stepping stone to the creation of this book, Onslug Guide.

In May 2013 I was interviewed for an article in The Huffington Post about the whole “Andy Kaufman Lives” phenomenon.

In September 2013, I added an audio drama from Canada called “A Career In The Weeklies”, which was originally released on the Internet in 2003–2005. I saw that it was no longer available anywhere, and since I loved it so much, I contacted its creator, Marc Gorcey, who provided me the files and gave me permission to share them.

In December 2013, I set up streaming Internet radio station called “Sneaky TT Broadcasting System” which aired random Other Sides, and currently airs random Other Side tracks. It never caught on, but the streaming is cheap, so I leave it going.

The first half of 2014 for me was dominated by VR – virtual reality. I had for many years dreamed of creating my own virtual worlds. In fact, when I created Bluffcosm way back in 1999, it was meant to be a virtual world, before I changed it to an Internet radio station a few months later.

I had gotten my Oculus Rift VR Developers Kit back in November 2013, and as 2014 began, I was creating my own VR experiences with the Unity platform.

I decided to bring back Nightstation as my VR project, naming it “Nightstation VR”. The idea was to create a virtual train station with dark rides inspired by the classic Disney theme park attractions.

I did eventually finish my “Nightstation Ride One” and got it listed on the Oculus site. Then I decided to go all out and become an exhibitor at the first ever consumer VR Expo in May 2014, SVVR, in Silicon Valley.

It was a major effort, and I had a great time at the VR Expo. But once I got home, I think it really sunk in how much time and effort would be required to take the next steps to starting a VR company, and I backed off the idea. It’s still dormant, but I do plan on reviving Nightstation again soon.

So yet another big project with a lot of potential collapsed around me... after the daily shows of 2005–2006, the ABM Show in 2007, and the WFMU show in 2009... there seems to be a pattern of me taking on big projects only to have them fall apart.

But of course, all through these experiences, I’ve been doing The Overnightscape, and telling the stories, with all the little ins and outs, of these events... so I don’t see these difficult experiences as a complete waste of time and energy. They are part of the narrative.

For the 11th Anniversary of The Overnightscape I released “The Frank Nora Time Machine” – a collection of 44 episodes spanning the entire history of the show.

In August 2014 I went to Toronto, recording The Overnightscape in another country for the first time.

Also in August I tried out a new project called “Earweird” – putting collections of Other Side audio onto YouTube. It was a brief experiment that didn’t go anywhere.

In September 2014, I was interviewed for a documentary film about Andy Kaufman called “Kaufman Lives”.

In January 2015 I began “The Night Pool”, a show composed of random 5-minute clips from the entire Onsug archive. It’s a very fascinating and very different kind of show, and it provides a fascinating glimpse into the nature of the enormous Onsug archive.

And that brings us up to date. This book, Onsug Guide, is my latest project. Working on it, I am really amazed at the size and scope of Onsug. There really isn’t anything else like it.

During the past 12 years, most of the time I’ve been dissatisfied with the situation, and I’ve always been trying to branch out and start new projects that could somehow make my work a “success”. And for whatever reason, it’s never happened, and we continue to exist in relative obscurity.

However, in the midst of this state of affairs, we have produced an unbelievably rich and complex and unique body of work. It really is mind-boggling. And it's ongoing – we're producing tons of new audio each month. And I plan on continuing things the same way.

And just think – you who are reading this now – the entire archive, all the audio that I've been talking about – every bit of it – is free and available for you to listen to right now.

I can hardly imagine what it will be like for someone to discover Onsug and go on a journey of listening that could last many years – even a lifetime.

And I hope this book is a big part of making that happen...

The List

The following pages list every single track currently in Onsug.

We encourage you to mark off the checkboxes to keep track of the shows you've listened to.

For complete descriptions of the topics discussed in each show, see the "Overnightscape Handbook" PDF, which is available at onsug.com/guide.

A few listings have an asterisk (*) – this shows that they are listed twice – once in The Overnightscape Underground Days, and once elsewhere. This was done to allow certain series to be listed together, while also being listed in The Overnightscape Underground Days.

These shows have people talking as they would to friends, so there is some "bad language", if that is a concern for you.

Frank in the original Overnightscape Studio, October 2005

Since 2003, Frank Edward Nora has been broadcasting his unique brand of lively, messy, stream-of-consciousness monologues to a small (but dedicated) Internet listening audience. Each episode is a pleasantly deranged ramble through the mysteries and pleasures of life, pop culture, current events, weirdness, technology, New York City, food, beverages, cartoons, conspiracy theories, childhood memories, New Jersey, coffee, the occult, Walt Disney World, vegetarianism, Star Wars, pinball, popcorn, Japan, mass transit, candy, video games, time travel, The Beatles, virtual reality, cigars, television, whiskey, and everything in-between.

In 2009, Frank welcomed in a diverse group of new hosts, to create a growing network of "Ramplers". Come join the fun – it's time for more people to tune in and discover The Overnightscape Underground!
